

Interview with Ben Judd: professional freelance digital artist

Ben goes to school with me and is earning a Bachelors in Animation and Game design but long before he started school he was already an accomplished traditional and Digital Artist. He currently works by commision and sells his art work at Comic Con and other conventions. He also does promotional art for the games and movies that peak his interest.

Questions:

1. Why did you chose this field?

Ben Replied:

“I grew up with movies like Lord of the Rings, and Star Wars, movies with incredible creatures, vehicles and characters. I wanted to make something like that. So for years I drew things that I thought were cool and I started making drawings or models that I thought were cool and now I'm here.”

It seems like Ben is one of those rare people that has enough drive and persistence to do exactly what he wants to do and make it work in his favor.

2. What is one thing you wish you knew before you got into your field?

Ben Replied:

“You can't slack off. You always have to be getting better.”

3. What's your favorite thing about your job?

Ben Replied:

“I get to make cool stuff and get paid for it.”
